

Dear Sir/Madam,

I am a common citizen. Please, please, please, please, do NOT lessen or water down the Indiana law which protects our citizens from unsolicited telephone calls. This is the best law that has ever been in place to protect the average consumer from the hassle of dinner time calls. I can personally vouch that the quality of life has dramatically improved because Indiana citizens have been protected from these consumer sharks who call non stop from 5pm until 9pm. If you have any sense of decency or fair play, I again appeal to you to stop any challenge to the Indiana law to protect our citizens. Indiana may be backwards when it comes to daylight savings time, but the state is light years ahead of the right coast or the left coast when it comes to quality of life and protecting its citizens from the consumer sharks.

Respectively submitted,

ps. NY CA FL AZ, etc. need to model there laws after the Indiana law on telephone solicitation. If you're reading this, come and live in Indiana for a few months and see how much better life can be without the constant interruptions at the dinner hour.
